options of employment with central or state governments' public health departments serving in positions like Medical Officer or Dental Surgeon. Here they would work closely with communities providing preventive care services such as immunization campaigns besides conducting oral health screening and treatment camps. She said likewise they could also be involved in formulating public oral hygiene policies and promoting dental wellness programs at schools and rural areas. Moreover, another avenue open for BDS professionals is Public Service Commission examinations conducted by several states, followed by interviews based on which candidates are selected per vacancies available at the Civil Services levels. Being permanent officers would provide career growth opportunities leading eventually toward leadership roles within the governmental infrastructure. Opportunities at Autonomous Bodies under Government, including Railways and Armed Forces, were also brought to the audience's notice, among several others. The students found the talk very encouraging and fruitful.
